

DoD Launches Deployment Health, Family Readiness Library

Service members, their families and their health care providers have a new online Defense Department resource for deployment health issues.

The DoD Deployment Health Risk Communication Working Group and the Joint Task Force for Family Readiness Education on Deployments have joined together to create the Deployment Health and Family Readiness Library.

The online library includes fact sheets, guides and other products on a wide variety of topics. The topic listing was based on feedback from service members, their families, and health care providers. The new information will be added to the site as new topics and areas of concern emerge.

In focus-group meetings, service members and their families have said their need for information varies before, during and after deployments. Leaders, in particular, look for accurate information before the deployment. While the service members are deployed, their families are especially interested in getting deployment health-related information and following deployments, both service members and families look for this information.

Visit the Deployment Health and Family Readiness Library at <http://deploymenthealthlibrary.fhp.osd.mil>.