

A message from the Chief of Information

I would like to thank each of you for making time to be here today for what is arguably the most important day of the year for the Navy outreach mission. Since 2005, the annual Calendar for America planning conference has been the foundation on which the coming year's outreach campaign is built. Today you will develop the strategy and refine our tactics for continuing the Navy's conversation with the country in 2013.

This conversation with America is one we must maintain. Gallup research and assessment of our outreach efforts, conducted over the past four years, has taught us much. We have learned that Americans hold a highly favorable opinion of the Navy, and that they are curious to learn more. But we have also learned that today's communication landscape is as cluttered as it ever has been, and that Americans are distracted. To be heard, our communication must be clear, concise, compelling, and spoken in a language that is understandable.

We made great strides in this capacity in 2012. Our world-class commemoration of the bicentennial of the War of 1812 showed America how so many of the qualities that shaped and helped the Navy win 200 years ago still hold true today. Building on one of the most successful elements of the Navy Week program, we spun off the senior leader engagement module to create the Navy 50/50 program, expanding our reach into America by sending 50 senior Navy leaders to 50 cities across the country for three days of engagements with civic groups, corporate executives, government officials, educators at all levels, community service groups and veterans organizations to share the Navy story.

Sharing the Navy story with all Americans remains a significant challenge. It is well documented that Americans are losing touch with the military services in general, as those who serve make up an ever decreasing percentage of the population. Unlike the other services, which enjoy a physical presence across the country in the form of installations and Guard units, our primary fleet concentration areas are on both coasts. And that is why outreach programs that bring our Sailors and our equipment to Americans living in cities far from the ocean are so vital. Being there matters.

Thank you all for being here today, for the work you have done, and for the very important work you will do in 2013.

Respectfully,

JOHN KIRBY
Rear Admiral, U.S. Navy

Across the nation, ten official Navy museums educate visitors about U.S. Navy history through exhibits, student curricula, and public programs. Dedicated to Fleet and community outreach, they are the National Museum of the U.S. Navy, Washington, DC; Great Lakes Naval Museum, Naval Station Great Lakes, IL; Hampton Roads Naval Museum, Norfolk, VA; National Naval Aviation Museum, Pensacola, FL; Naval Undersea Museum, Keyport, WA; Puget Sound Navy Museum, Bremerton, WA; Naval War College Museum, Newport, RI; U.S. Navy Seabee Museum, Port Hueneme, CA; Submarine Force Museum and Historic Ship Nautilus, Groton, CT; and U.S. Naval Academy Museum, Annapolis, MD. The Naval History and Heritage Command also manages a Boston detachment that maintains USS Constitution, the Navy's oldest commissioned warship, which is open for public tours.

The command publishes a wide variety of knowledge products that serve the need for comprehensive and objective information on U.S. naval history, from web exhibits and brochures to scholarly works. Volume 12 of The Naval Documents of the American Revolution is in production and volume 4 of The Naval War of 1812 is in development, with expected publication in mid-2013 and mid-2014, respectively. Since 2009 the NHHC has released four titles in the Vietnam War series—The Approaching Storm, Nixon's Trident, The Battle Behind Bars, and Navy Medicine in Vietnam—and historians continue to work on the series in anticipation of the Defense Department's commemoration of the war. In May 2012 the command released its newest publication, Ready Seapower: A History of the U.S. Seventh Fleet, which complements the 2007 Anchor of Resolve: A History of U.S. Naval Forces Central Command/Fifth Fleet. The quintessential reference work Dictionary of American Naval Fighting Ships (DANFS) is online and regularly updated, and a new edition of the chronology United States Naval Aviation is also in production.

The command website (www.history.navy.mil) provides a wealth of information for researchers, such as original records, photographs, publications, Navy instructions, and ships' histories. From its modest beginning in 1995 to today's updated design, the website continues to add resources such as the online Library catalog and FOIA reading room. A vibrant presence on Facebook, Flickr, YouTube, Twitter, and other sites broadly communicate the value of the command's intellectual and heritage assets, and a naval blog in partnership with the U.S. Naval Institute invites thoughtful dialogue and interaction with the public and the Navy. Together these resources connect the Web 2.0 generation to the Navy's history, heritage, and significant contributions to the nation's safety and prosperity.

The Naval History and Heritage Command continues to build on the legacy of its predecessors, serving as the Navy's institutional memory and central resource on naval history, traditions, and customs. Combining technology, subject matter expertise, and robust community outreach programs, the command informs the Navy, the U.S. government, and the American people of the nation's rich naval heritage and its connections to present-day operations in a global environment.

The Naval History and Heritage Command (NHHC), headed by CAPT Henry J. (Jerry) Hendrix II (PhD), the Director of Naval History, manages the official history program of the U. S. Navy. A professional staff of archivists, curators, historians, librarians, museum specialists, and Navy personnel carries out historical activities and provides resources to the Fleet.

The Naval History and Heritage Command traces its lineage to 1800 when President John Adams asked Benjamin Stoddert, the first Secretary of the Navy, to prepare a catalog of professional books for the secretary's office. Following the War of 1812, the library moved to various locations, including the State, War, and Navy Building (now the Eisenhower Executive Office Building). In 1882 the library was placed in the Bureau of Navigation. Completed in 1927, the 31 volumes in the Civil War series marked the beginning of a responsibility to collect, edit, and publish historic naval documents, a mission that the NHHC continues today.

Once America entered World War I, emphasis shifted to gathering documents, such as war diaries and operational reports, from naval commands deployed in the European theater. To handle the arrival of these records, the Navy established a Historical Section in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations. The library, by now holding more than 50,000 volumes, remained separate in the State, War, and Navy Building. Before the war ended, President Franklin D. Roosevelt commissioned Harvard professor Samuel Eliot Morison to lead a team of historians in preparing the 15-volume History of United States Naval Operations in World War II.

Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal established the Office of Naval History to coordinate the Morison volumes and other history projects. In 1949 that office merged with the Office of Naval Records and Library and was renamed the Naval History Division. Using Knox's artifact collection, Chief of Naval Operations (CNO) Admiral Arleigh Burke established in 1962 a sea heritage display center (now the National Museum of the United States Navy) in the historic Washington Navy Yard. When the Naval History Division shifted from a headquarters establishment to a field activity under the CNO in 1971, it was renamed the Naval Historical Center (NHC) and moved its activities, including the library, to the Navy Yard. In 2005 the Navy museums were consolidated under the Naval Historical Center, which was redesignated to the Naval History and Heritage Command in 2008.

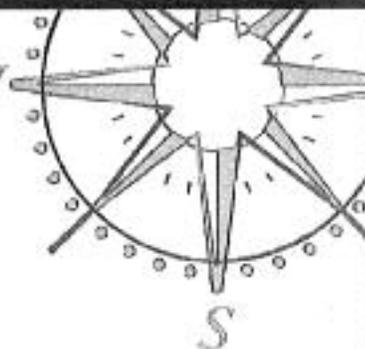

Today, the NHHC collects, preserves, and makes available the artwork, artifacts, documents, photographs, and other materials that best embody the U.S. Navy's history and heritage. It oversees Navy programs and instructions related to history; produces and publishes historical knowledge products in a variety of media; plans and executes nationwide commemorations, such as the War of 1812 bicentennial and the yearly Battle of Midway celebration; advises the Navy, other agencies, and the public regarding Navy ship and aircraft wrecks; and administers grants, fellowships, and internships.

Staff experts in reference and research respond to Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) and Department of Veterans Affairs requests; recommend ship and facility names for the Secretary of the Navy; and answer inquiries from Congress, the Navy, and the public. Through reference services, the interlibrary loan program, and internet outreach, the Navy Department Library provides public access to books, manuscripts, and other textual sources that enrich the understanding of naval and maritime history, customs, and traditions. A Senior Historian, who oversees research and writing projects, also serves as the command liaison with government-wide history programs and academic institutions.

A Navy Reserve documentation detachment and volunteer unit provide a vital link between the command and the Fleet. Since 1991, Reserve historians have deployed to U.S. Navy, joint, and combatant commands worldwide to conduct oral history interviews, collect historically significant artifacts and documents, and produce combat art.

CNO's^W Diversity Vision

CNO's Sailing Directions describe a vision of the contribution and characteristics of the Navy over the next 10-15 years. Today and in the next decade, ready Sailors and Civilians will remain the centerpiece of Navy's warfighting capability. To maintain our warfighting edge, it is essential that our people be diverse in experience, background and ideas; personally and professionally ready; and proficient in the operation of their weapons and systems. Diversity is not founded on statistics, percentages, or quotas. Diversity is about achieving peak performance. Our force will draw upon the widest possible set of talents and backgrounds to maximize our warfighting capability, adapt to address new threats and challenges, and take advantage of new opportunities. The unique personal characteristics and skills of each Sailor and Civilian will continue to add value to our Navy. Our efforts to attain and sustain a force of diverse talent and experience will be an intrinsic part of recruiting, developing, retaining and employing our people. We will continue to be united by our shared commitment to the Nation and each other as part of one Navy team. Every Sailor and Civilian will adhere to a professional culture of fairness and respect, and value the contributions each one makes to the Navy's warfighting capability, forward operations and readiness.

Recruiting a diverse force:

- The Navy will employ proven and cost-effective recruiting strategies and techniques to attract the best talent and imagination that America has to offer, wherever it may be.

Developing a diverse force:

- We will continue to ensure that every new Sailor and Civilian has an equal chance of developing his or her talents to their fullest potential in an environment free of discrimination, preferential treatment, or any manner of exclusion or intolerance.
- Each Sailor and Civilian will be inspired and empowered to contribute and to attain the highest levels of leadership based upon his or her sustained level of performance.

Institutionalizing diversity:

- Diversity within our force will be viewed as an integral part of the Navy's effectiveness in warfighting, operating forward and being ready. We will evaluate ourselves accordingly.
- Leaders will be accountable for the performance of their communities and commands including the education, technical proficiency and professional development of their Sailors and Civilians – as well as ensuring that their Sailors and Civilians understand the cultures in which we operate.
- We will assess ourselves honestly and unambiguously and be transparent with the results. Our leaders will continue to evaluate themselves, their communities and commands, and report to me with tangible efforts to develop, retain and promote talented people based on ability and performance. We will share "best practices" and pursue continued improvement.

Navy Bands: What You Need to Know

- Let the band help you
 - Contact them early; they can help you plan and set up performances (preferred method)
- Bands deliver Navy key messages from the stage
- Bands have the ability, given proper notice, to alter music in order to focus on target audience or a particular venue
 - Music is not necessarily the same for Fargo and Indianapolis
- All Bands are structured basically the same, but assets (units) vary because they are dependent on current onboard manning
 - A least two bands are currently without trained vocalist

RMKS/1. REF A SETS FORTH REQUIREMENTS FOR COMMUNITY OUTREACH. THIS MESSAGE AMPLIFIES REQUIREMENTS FOR NAVY WEEKS, ONE OF THE NAVY'S KEY OUTREACH PROGRAMS REACHING AREAS OF THE COUNTRY WITHOUT A SIGNIFICANT NAVY PRESENCE. NAVY WEEKS ARE LED BY THE NAVY OFFICE OF COMMUNITY OUTREACH (NAVCO), A CHIEF OF INFORMATION (CHINFO) FIELD ACTIVITY.

2. BECAUSE THE NAVY'S PRIMARY FLEET CONCENTRATION AREAS ARE ON BOTH COASTS, COMMUNICATING THE NAVY MISSION AND CONTRIBUTION TO NATIONAL SECURITY THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY IS A PARTICULAR AND UNIQUE CHALLENGE. NAVY WEEKS ARE PLANNED AND EXECUTED TO ADDRESS THIS CHALLENGE. THE OBJECTIVE OF THE NAVY WEEK PROGRAM IS TO INCREASE UNDERSTANDING OF THE NAVY'S ROLE IN PRESERVING OUR NATION'S SECURITY AND PROSPERITY. DURING A NAVY WEEK, A VARIETY OF OUTREACH STRATEGIES AND TACTICS ARE EMPLOYED TO COMMUNICATE KEY NAVY MESSAGES TO A RANGE OF HIGH-LEVEL CORPORATE, CIVIC, GOVERNMENT, EDUCATION, MEDIA, VETERAN, COMMUNITY SERVICE AND DIVERSITY ORGANIZATIONS. NAVY WEEKS INCLUDE FLAG OFFICERS TO LEAD THE EFFORT, AND A RANGE OF SAILORS AND EQUIPMENT TO SHOWCASE THE NAVY'S DIVERSE PEOPLE AND CAPABILITIES, INCLUDING THE BLUE ANGELS, LEAP FROGS, NAVY BANDS, NAVY DIVERS, SEABEES, EXPLOSIVE ORDNANCE DISPOSAL TEAMS, NAMESAKE SHIP CREWS, HOMETOWN SAILORS, MEDICAL PERSONNEL, HISTORICAL DISPLAYS AND ARTIFACTS, USS CONSTITUTION SAILORS AND EQUIPMENT, AND NAVY RECRUITING PROPERTIES, AMONG OTHERS.

3. LEVERAGING EIGHT YEARS OF NAVY WEEK EXECUTION EXPERIENCE AND THREE YEARS OF ANALYSIS AND ASSESSMENTS COMPILED BY GALLUP CORP, NAVCO HAS DETERMINED SPECIFIC NAVY WEEK REQUIREMENTS TO ACHIEVE THE MOST EFFECTIVE OUTREACH EVENTS AS DEFINED BY THEIR ABILITY TO DELIVER NAVY MESSAGING TO KEY INFLUENCERS IN ALL MARKET SECTORS. THERE WILL BE 18 NAVY WEEKS IN 2013. GENERAL REQUIREMENTS SUMMARY FOLLOWS:

- A. 9 NAVY WEEKS ICW BLUE ANGEL AIR SHOW PERFORMANCES
- B. 18 NAVY WEEKS WITH LEAP FROGS PARTICIPATING FOR 3-5 DAYS OF EVENTS DEPENDING ON VENUES, OPPORTUNITIES AND FUNDING
- C. 18 NAVY WEEKS WITH AN EXPEDITIONARY UNIT (DIVERS, EOD TEAMS, RIVERINE OR SEABEES) PARTICIPATING IN AT LEAST 5 DAYS OF EVENTS.
- D. 17 NAVY WEEKS WITH AT LEAST 5 NAMESAKE CREW SAILORS PARTICIPATING IN AT LEAST 5 DAYS OF EVENTS.
- E. 18 NAVY WEEKS WITH NOSC SAILORS PARTICIPATING, WITH SPECIFIC NUMBERS OF SAILORS AND DAYS OF PARTICIPATION COORDINATED SEPARATELY BETWEEN EACH PARTICIPATING NOSC AND NAVY WEEK PLANNING TEAM.
